Alsace-Lorraine.

The territory transferred to France 1918 has been divided into three departments: Haut-Rhin (Upper Alsace) Bas-Rhin (Lower Alsace) and Moselle (Lorraine). Official publications of the departments are entered under the headings

Moselle, France (Dept.)
Rhin, Bas-, France (Dept.)
Rhin, Haut-, France (Dept.)

with subheadings as the case may be.

The Office de statistique d'Alsace et de Lorraine, attached to the Direction du travail, under the auspices of the Commissariat général de la république, is not part of the departmental administration; its publications (continuing those of the Statistisches bureau, later Statistisches landesamt, 1871-1918) are entered under the heading France. Office de statistique d'Alsace et de Lorraine.

The main part of this work is the "Sacrum commentum beati Francisci cum Domina Paupertate" (p. [13]–54) by some authorities ascribed to Joannes Parmensis, and here published to supply an illustration to part of canto xi of the Paradiso. It is not, as the editor assumes, the first edition, having been previously published at Milan, 1520. The "Sacrum commentum" was also printed separately (48 p.)

Alvord, Irvin T.

"Hell harnessed" here—now—forever through rite rule, a self-perfecting social machine founded on selfishness through lure of gain—and—fear of loss, automatically keeping the best man and the best plan square to the front and ever acting—giving the best that cumulative wisdom and efficiency can produce, making Uncle Sam "every day, in every way, better and better", up to the highest perfection humanly attainable. In the same volume is disputed. cf. Bardenhewer, Ibid., v. 3, p. 517.

De excidio urbis Hierosolymitanae in v. 1, pt. 2, transmitted with the works of Ambrosius, is a Latin recension of the De bello judaico of Flavius Josephus. Bardenhewer, Ibid., v. 3, p. 507, ascribes the translation to Ambrosius, but withdraws the ascription in his Erganzungen on p. 677 of the same volume.

The authorship of De lapsu virginis is in v. 2, pt. 1, is possibly to be ascribed to Nicetas of Remesiana. cf. Bardenhewer, Ibid., v. 3, p. 523. De mysteriis, disputed by some, is genuine. cf. Bardenhewer, Ibid., v. 3, p. 528. De sacramentis is spurious. It is very likely a 5th century imitation of an Ambrosian original. cf. Bardenhewer, Ibid., v. 3, p. 531. Of the hymns, only four are universally accepted as genuine: Aeterne rerum conditor, Deus creator omnium, Iam surgit hora tertia, Veni redemptor gentium. cf. Bardenhewer, Ibid., v. 3, p. 544-545.

Vol. 1 contains memoirs dating from the foundation of the academy in 1780 to the end of the year 1783.
No memoirs in quarto were published 1874-1881. Vol. 10, no. 8 (Embryology of the Ctenophora by Alexander Agassiz) was printed in August 1874, but was not distributed by the academy, though some copies were distributed by the author. When publication was resumed in 1881, the paper of Mr. Agassiz was overlooked, its paging being duplicated and the volume completed and distributed without it. In 1885 it was distributed as a supplement to v. 10, pt. 2, together with a new table of contents: cf. "Note" following table of contents of v. 10, pt. 2.
Vol. 11, pt. 1, "Centennial volume", includes full list of officers and members of the academy, 1780-1881.

American alumni council.

Organized 1913 as Association of alumni secretaries; in 1923 the Association of alumnae secretaries was merged with it; in 1927 the association (comprising alumni and alumnae), the Alumni magazines associated (organized 1918) and the Association of alumni funds (organized 1926) were consolidated into one organization, under the name of American alumni council.

In the Library of Congress catalogue the publications of the Alumni magazines associated and of the Association of alumni funds are entered under the respective names of the two organizations up to the time of the consolidation; the publications of the Association of alumni secretaries and of its successor the American alumni council are all entered under the latter name, as the reports form a continuous series.

American anti-slavery society. Annual report ... 1834-61. (Card 2)

In 1840 there was a split in the society, the seceding members forming a new organization under the name of American and foreign anti-slavery society. No reports were published by the older society for a number of years (1840?-1854?) as the reports of the Massachusetts anti-slavery society covered the ground. In 1858 it was decided by the American society to resume the publication of reports and to merge in them the reports of the Massachusetts society. Owing to a delay, this was not carried out until 1855.
The American anti-slavery society ceased to exist in 1870.
